About United Palace:

The United Palace is a spectacular theatre in the Washington Heights neighborhood of Northern Manhattan that is owned by the nondenominational United Palace of Spiritual Arts, which fosters personal growth by uniting spirituality, art, entertainment, and community. The building has been in continuous operation for 91 years. The history of the United Palace begins in 1930 when it opened as one of five Loew's "Wonder Theatres," premiere vaudeville and movie houses located in four boroughs and New Jersey. The outrageously ornate architecture was designed by noted architect Thomas Lamb (Cort Theater, the former Ziegfeld Theatre) and decorative specialist Harold Rambusch (Waldorf Astoria, Radio City Music Hall). Noted architecture critic David Dunlap described the ornate interior as

"Byzantine-Romanesque-Indo-Hindu-Sino-Moorish-Persian-Eclectic-Rococo-Deco."

With nearly 3,400 seats the United Palace is Manhattan's 4th largest theatre. It hosts concerts (Lenny Kravitz, Ms. Lauryn Hill, Bad Bunny, Trey Anastasio), film shoots (SNL with J. Lo, "John Wick 3," Lin-Manuel Miranda and AmEx), movie premieres ("Mary Poppins Returns," "In the Heights," "High Strung - Free Dance"), and other corporate and community events. The in-house selection of state-of-the-art technology updates the 1930 opulence for 21st century audiences.

In 1969 the building was purchased by an organization now known as the United Palace of Spiritual Arts. It continues to honor the theatre's history by producing and presenting both sacred and entertaining experiences, touching audiences from around the corner and around the world. Online offerings include weekly services on the Power of Spiritual Artistry, in-depth conversations about the world's great wisdom traditions – from the Abrahamic religions to Zoroastrianism – and personalized introductions to astrology, tarot, shamanism, goddesses, and other belief systems. The Sanctuary of Spirituality is located in the Grand Foyer and also available for private contemplation online 24 hours a day. UPSA believes Spiritual Artistry is the full realization of all that it means to be alive; every human being is a Spiritual Artist.
